Bold contemporary design steps from Carillon Point, where western-facing views stretch across Lake Washington to the Olympic Mountains. Thoughtfully remodeled in 2006, this home was shaped around its setting, with view decks on two levels that frame the lake from both the main living spaces and the upper-level primary suite above. The kitchen anchors the main floor around a generous center island flowing naturally into spaces designed as much for gathering as for simply settling in with the view. Upstairs, the primary suite opens to its own view deck; a gas fireplace and five-piece bath complete the retreat.

A dedicated home gym with its own heating occupies one bay of the three-car garage and converts back easily when needs change. This is a home where the lake is part of the daily rhythm. Carillon Point's waterfront dining and Kirkland's finest shoreline trails are steps from your door, with downtown Kirkland's shops and restaurants just minutes away. Top-rated schools, easy freeway access, and a straightforward commute to Seattle, Bellevue, and the Eastside's major employment centers make the location as practical as it is enviable.
